

The York Wellbeing in Mind team are a new team of NHS employed staff working into 8 primary schools, secondary schools and further education settings to offer support to children and young people experiencing common emotional wellbeing difficulties. The team includes clinical leads, senior clinicians, an occupational therapist and education mental health practitioners (EMHPs). As a team, they can offer direct work, group work, parent-led work, and deliver assemblies to raise awareness for mental health. Do ask your school if you would like any further information.
